

Americanization of Women: A Discussion of an Emergency Created by Granting the Vote to Women in New York State

Cover of a program from a lecture discussing the intersection of immigration and women's suffrage. The lecture was given by Frances A. Kellor (1873-1952), who received her law degree from Cornell University in 1897. She was known in her time for trying to bring about social change, and she worked for the New York State Immigration Commission in 1909.
